With the whole world slowly being converted into iPods, even if you're a sworn Apple-hater you'll properly wake up one morning and realise you own four of the darn things. A quality dock lets everyone enjoy the latest music you totally legitimately downloaded, without all that tedious mucking around with RCA cables. The B&W Zeppelin combines the kind of plinth-art your low-slung lounge room demands with audio quality born of its direct descent from B&W's 800 Series reference speaker – the one they still use at Abbey Road. Seriously though, with roughly 14 million iPod docks on the market at last count, you'll be choosing this one for its elegant looks.
